Lemon Grove Historical Society to install new Board of Directors

The public is invited to attend the next regular meeting of the Lemon Grove Historical Society on June 7th, 1:30 p.m. in the community room of the library. The program will consist of the installation of the 1990/91 board of directors. Dr. Amorita Treganza, outgoing president, will instate Pete Smith as president, Eva Pinkham as first vice-president (in charge of programming), Betty Hunter as second vice-president (in charge of membership), secretary is pending, and rounding out the august group will be John Davis, Sr. as treasurer. Refreshments will be served immediately afterwards.

This will be a perfect opportunity to welcome the new board members and thank those who have worked so hard in the past preserving our city's history.

SDG&E rates to rise

San Diego Gas & Electric electric rates will soon be going up 4% under a settlement reached by the utility and several outside parties last January and approved today by the California Public Utilities Commission. Residential rates will go up 2%, commercial and industrial rates 6%, agricultural rates 8%, and street lighting 4%.

Bills for a typical residential usage of 423 kilowatt hours a month will increase $1.28, going from $42.11 at present to $43.39.

The increase amounts to $50,312,000 a year and basically reflects changes in SDG&E's costs of producing or purchasing electricity.

The need for the increase adopted today was based on an agreement signed January 23 by SDG&E, UCAN, the California Cogeneration Council, Kelco, the U.S. Department of Ratepayer Advocates (DRA). These parties agreed on all aspects of the increase except residential rate design, which was decided recently by the CPUC.

The increase become effective five days after SDG&E files its revised rates with the CPUC.

Foothill artists present work

This month's Foothills Art Association featured artist is Barbara McDermott, an artist in many medias, renowned in the San Diego community for her work with the San Diego Zoo.

This show, a presentation of the artist's best work, will begin on Friday, June 8th and will continue Tuesday through Saturday from 11 a.m. to 4 p.m. until Thursday, July 5th. Other members will submit one previously unseen work for this show. These other works will be subject to judging by votes of the viewing public.

An artist demonstration is a part of each regular meeting. The next demonstrating artist, scheduled after the next regular meeting on Thursday, June 7th, will be Robert Landry. Mr. Landry has taught art for over 25 years.

Many Foothill's artists learned the basics from Bob Landry, who is an annual demonstrator at Foothills.

Foothills Art Association is a non-profit group of local artists located at 8051 University Avenue, La Mesa and is open to the public.

Competing for Fairest of the Fair

Two days of hard work and fun culminated May 25th in the crowning of Jervau Marino, Miss La Mesa, as the Fairest of the Fair/Miss San Diego County at the Del Mar Fair Grounds.

Miss Lemon Grove Wendy Bailey was among the 36 community pageant winners who were judged Thursday and Friday night in interviews, sportswear, evening gowns and overall personality and poise.

The theme of the pageant was "Anchors Away" and all of the contestants sang and danced to the theme song as the pageant's major production number.

"Wendy did just great and it was an excellent pageant," said

Erica Aldrich, director of the Miss Lemon Grove Pageant. Other Lemon Grove residents attending the pageant said Wendy danced beautifully and gave it her all. "She was an excellent representative of the community," said Joyce Lazok, executive director of the Lemon Grove Chamber of Commerce.

Local student wins regional title

Eight-year-old, Cyndi Thornton, daughter of Charli Keith of Lemon Grove, has won Little Miss San Diego Model Search.

A Third-grader at Golden Avenue Elementary, she will compete in the state pageant at the Disneyland Hotel in July for the title of Queen.

The pageant is sponsored by Gold Coast Beauty Pageants. The girls are judged on a number of criteria from talent and ramp modeling to charm and dimples. Thornton won eight trophies at the San Diego regional pageant including Miss Dimples, Charmer, Ramp Model, and Talent. She dances and lip syncs Paula Abdul's "Cold Hearted Snake."

"I think it's a great experience for her to learn different things - modeling and talent. She really enjoys it, and we support her in everything," said her stepmother Kim Thornton.

"I like the talent part the best. The worst part of it is changing into different dresses all the time," Cyndi said.

She would like to model children's clothes, but doesn't want to be a model when she grows up.

"I want to be a lawyer so I can help people," she said.

Thornton's older sister, Jacqui, and brothers, Danny, Sean, and Aaron will join her in future pageants.

Aside from pageants, Thornton enjoys swimming, bike riding, skating and collecting baseball cards.

What do friends at school say? "When I told them I was going to Disneyland they didn't say much except, 'Can I come?'," she said.

Each pageant costs nearly $300 to enter. Thornton has several sponsors who she says have been very helpful. They are Sid's Carpet Barn, Bernie's Upholstery, Broadway Autobody, Law Offices of Jefferey Schwartz, Phil Shapiro, and Robert Thorn, Jim McManagle, Farmer's Insurance, and Carpet Country.

Cyndi displays the trophies she won and her winning smile!

Chiropractic center opens

Stewart Chiropractic Center located at 6963 Broadway, held its Grand Opening Thursday, May 24. Mayor Jim Dorman and Miss Lemon Grove Wendy Bailey presided over the ribbon cutting ceremony and Dr. Boyd Stewart conducted visitors on a tour of the center.

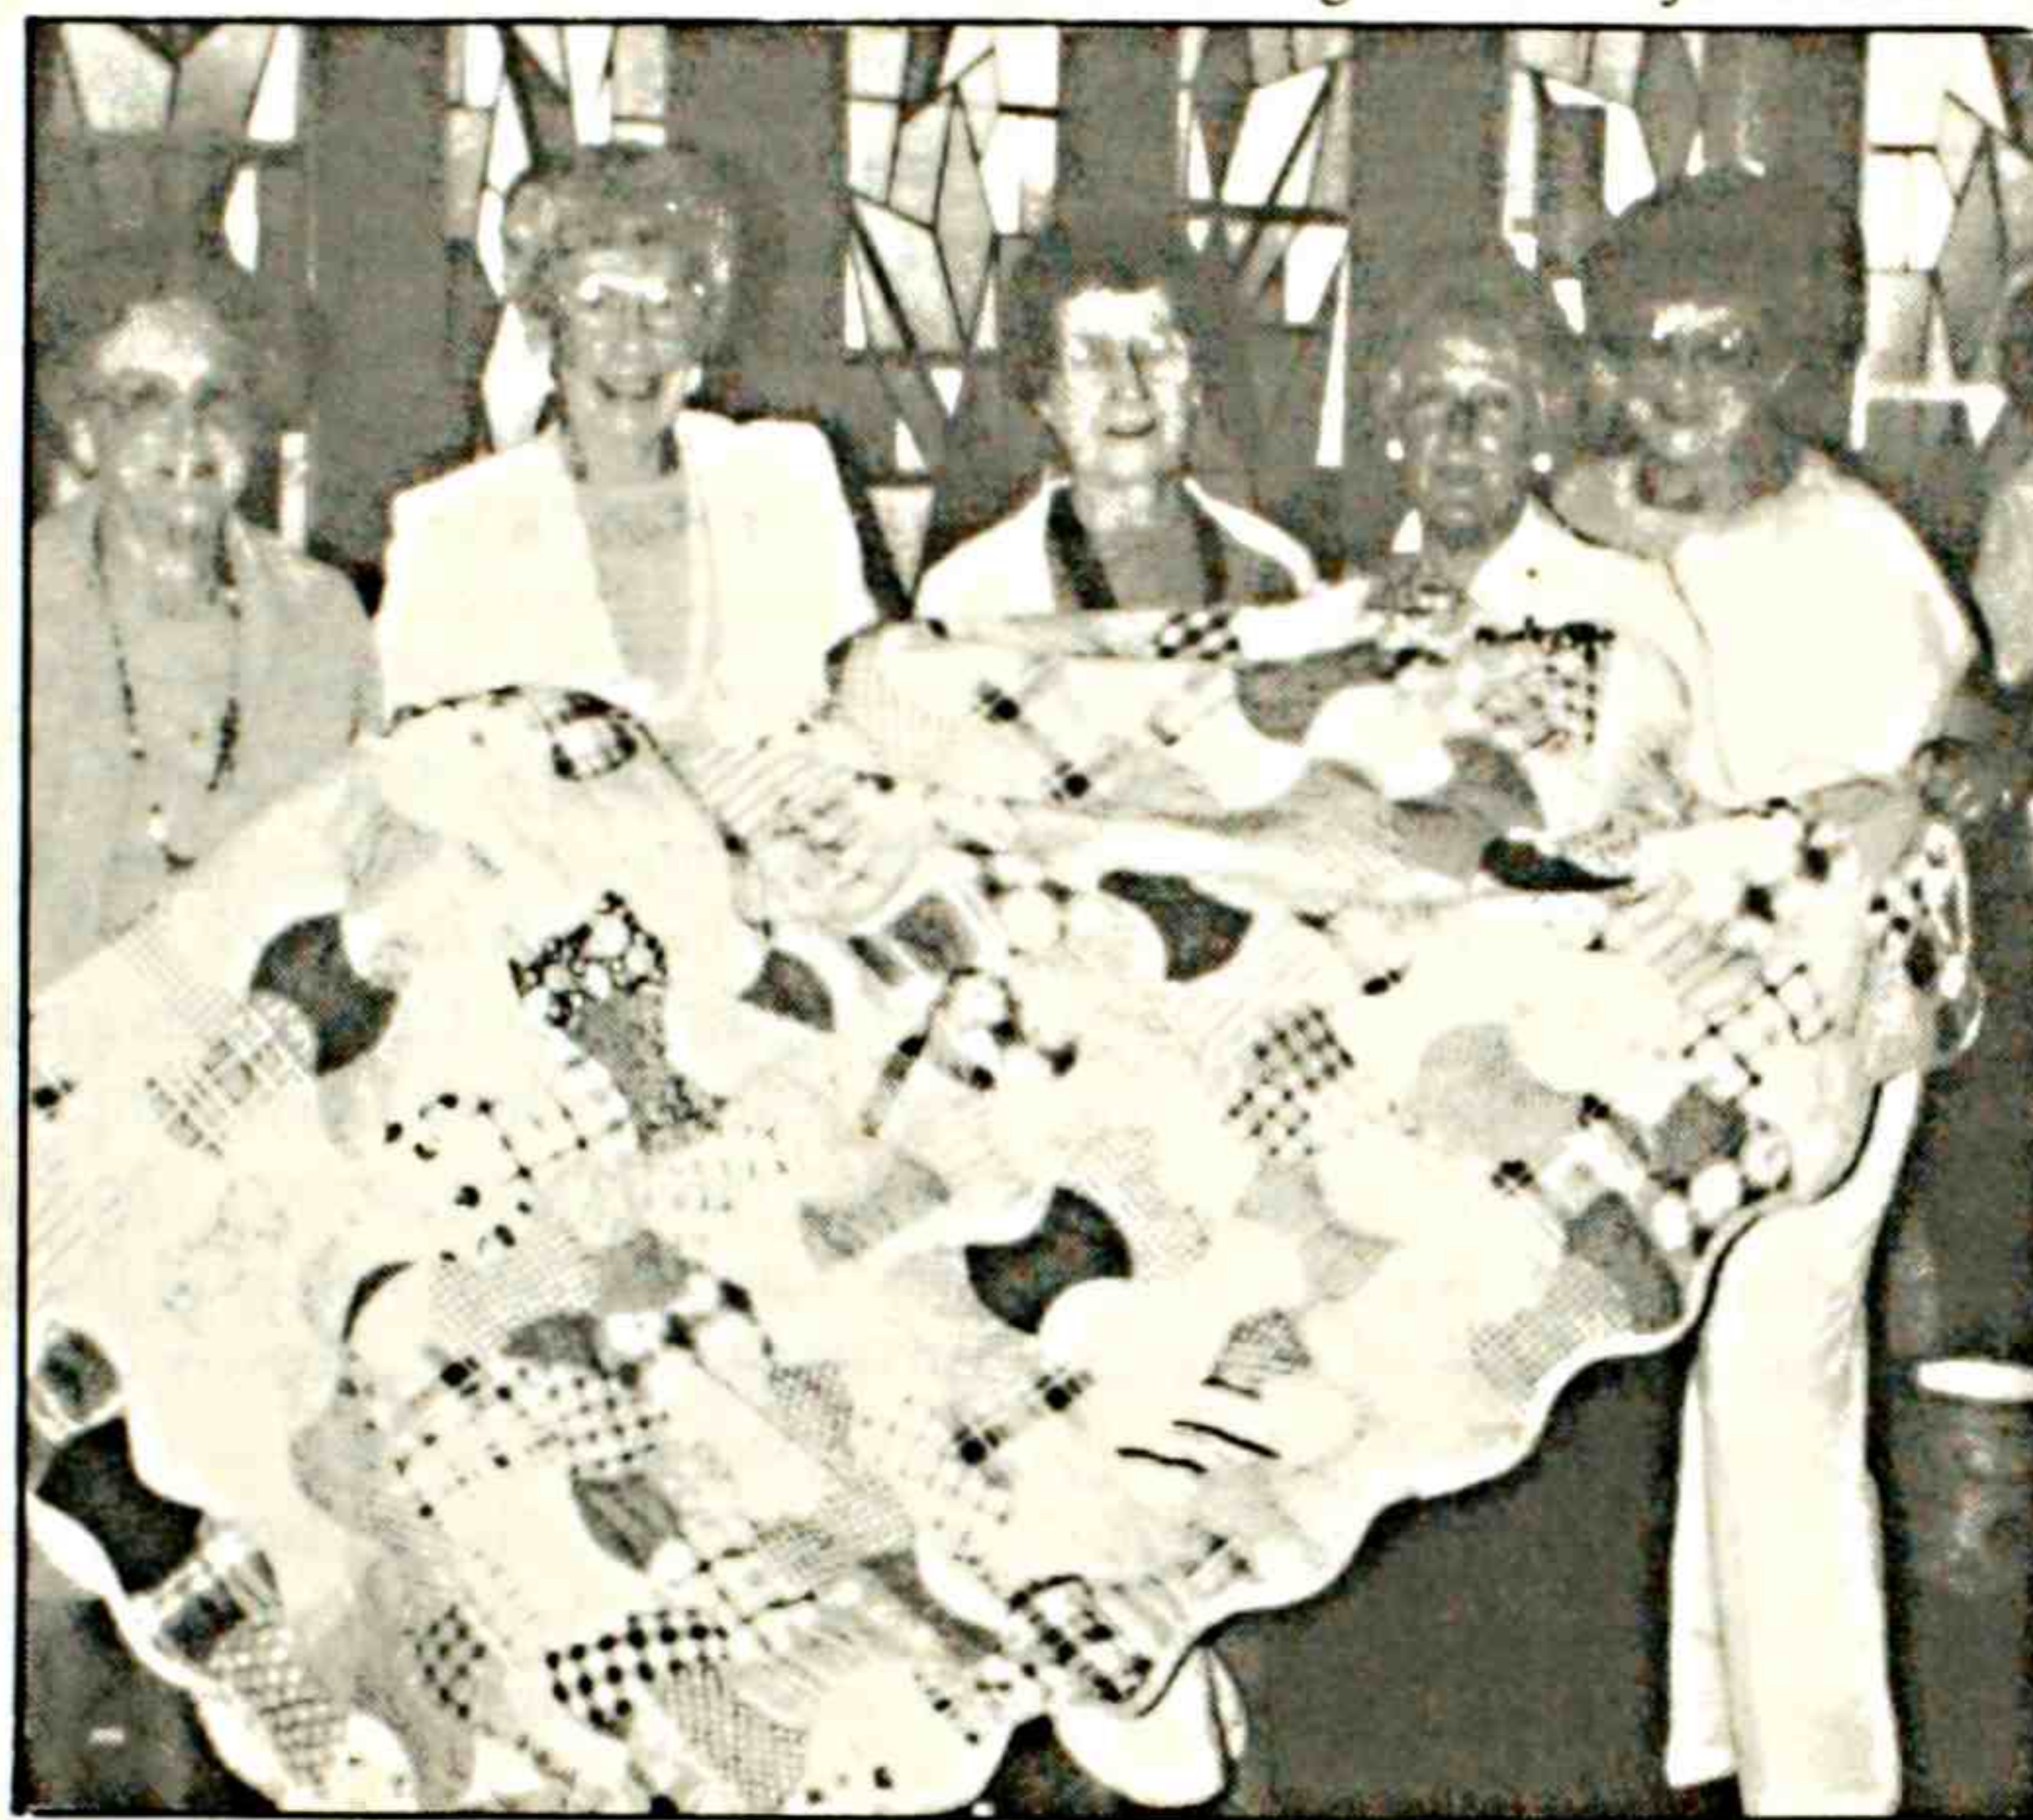

The center features an x-ray room, with the convenience of an in-house x-ray processing room. There are three adjustment rooms, one examining room and a large therapy room.

Dr. Stewart said that today's new x-ray machines emit such low radiation that "We can do a series of neck x-rays that expose a patient to less radiation than a series of dental x-rays." Stewart said most of his therapy is done with moist heat to loosen muscles and he uses no needles.

A Setback for the NRA

Despite the anger and shock expressed by the National Rifle Association at the U.S. Senate's recent vote to limit the sale of assault weapons, even they must see that the national tide is beginning to flow against their unreasonable stand on unrestricted ownership and use of such "overkill" weaponry. Senators once "knee-jerk" faithful to the NRA and its indomitable lobby, have begun to vote with greater independence sending out, it is hoped, the message that "enough is enough."

After years of crying in the wilderness against seemingly overwhelming odds, gun control supporters have, at last, gained a vitally important ally - a national coalition of police chiefs and sheriffs who have been vigorously lobbying members of the Senate on behalf of the assault weapon ban.

"We're tired of passing out flags to the widows of officers killed by drug dealers with Uzis," said Baltimore, Maryland, County Police official Leonard Supenski. With many of these law enforcement officials being gun owners and fanciers themselves, it would seem clear that the assault weapon position of the NRA is a step too far.

Already the daily papers are filled with the well-orchestrated letters from NRA supporters trotting out their shopworn arguments of constitutional protection, well-armed militias and "if you control guns, only the criminals will have them." We are not speaking here of hunting rifles or shotguns. Nor are we looking at carefully screened and licensed handgun ownership. Instead we are talking about Uzis, Kalashnikovs and their like...weapons designed for war, terrorism and mass killing. To stretch the 200-year-old constitutional concept of a well-armed militia to indiscriminate ownership of these weapons is absurd.

The NRA argues that once the government bans even one kind of weapon, it is only a matter of time until all guns are banned. Given the history and sociological makeup of our country, this is highly doubtful. Americans love their guns and are bound to have them, even though there are already too many in the hands of people who will misuse the privilege of gun ownership.

But there is no acceptable rationale for private ownership of assault weapons. Our police chiefs and sheriffs know it and are finally beginning to be heard. If the Congress can maintain even a little of its new-found courage, we may finally see a bit of legislative sanity in the area of gun ownership.

Sports Commentary

The Blue Collar Game

Baseball is a "blue collar" kind of game. Everybody on the team works every day. There is a daily routine of preparation and the game itself is a down in the dirt scramble that follows a time-honored format.

There is a beginning and, although sometimes separated by hours because of curfew, darkness, rain, snow or other whims of fate, there is an end.

There are neophytes who say all the games look alike to them, but the truth of the sport is that every game, every inning, every situation, the purpose of each pitch is different and must be played accordingly.

There is also an ancient and honorable rule that says the game must be played by the players on the field. Players on the bench and in the bullpen are expected to be ready at a warm-up's notice, but only the nine guys out there have the opportunity to make the plays, score the runs and win, or lose, the game.

It's tough to keep the fighting fires hot while riding the bench. Managers know that. Smart managers do something about it.

Padre manager (and VP in charge of baseball operations) Jack McKeon is a near genius at his craft. He knows that 10 pitchers and eight starters leaves him with seven guys riding the hardwood.

They all want to play. They worked their way to the major leagues and now they want a chance to do their thing. How does he keep them happy? He can't. Player's contentment isn't one of his concerns. Winning is his goal. And he needs razor-sharp reserves to win.

How does he do it? How does any manager of any team keep his bench in the game, razor sharp and ready to play?

That's touching on the tenthooks of managing. Keeping players in the game ranks right up there in managing skills with a decent rotation and proper use of relief pitchers.

Sometimes the manager has to swallow hard and sweat it out with a guy fighting the stiffness of inaction. The game is played on the field, but they bleed on the bench with each error.

Consider Joey Cora, reserve middle infielder with dust on his glove. He went in to spell Gary Templeton last week in New York and committed three costly errors. The Padres lost 11-0. What can a manager do - rant and rave, and ship the erring player out? That doesn't solve anything. First off, Cora is a much better ball player than that box score indicates. He has all the tools. What he needs is understanding and a lot more playing time.

Tempe played in 40 of the first 43 games. Second baseman Roberto Alomar, the other gifted starter Cora backs up, played 42 of the 43 games to date.

McKeon knows he needs a rested and healthy Templeton on the field. He also knows he can't win without young, gifted players like Joey Cora, Jerald Clark, Darrin Jackson, Phil Stephenson and Shawn Abner ready and waiting to get into the game.

He also has to help them keep their playing edge. A few errors now might mean a few more victories down the stretch.

You need a lot of insight to be a winning manager. Hindsight is the tool of writers, rogues, rascals and fickle fans who pledge loyalty only when the team is winning.

Summer should not be a vacation from learning

by John Zoglin, Executive Director,
San Diego Sylvan Learning Centers

The crisis in education and diminished academic achievement among U.S. students is one of the hottest topics around today. The media routinely headlines slipping math and science scores; declining educational standards and quality; and dwindling skills proficiency.

What does that have to do with summer vacation?

Building the resources that come from our minds and the minds of our children must become a year-round activity. Learning and education is at least as important an activity during summer recess as it is in the winter just before final exams.

Conventional school schedules, based on a century-and-a-half old agrarian economy, effectively shut down the learning process of many children for three months out of the year. Yet the long-term implications of inadequate education for our children are enormous.

Providing the opportunity for children means augmenting their regular educational experience. Parents should not allow the learning process to be shut down for one-quarter of each year.

The U.S. Department of Education brings the issue to a very individual level in its recent report on dwindling math skills. Students who take more high school and university mathematics courses earn considerably higher income in their first ten years of work than do their peers with fewer math skills. "More math means more money," the study concludes. Or, to state it another way, more education means better opportunity, enhanced earning potential, and improved quality of life.

If students are not in a year-round school, parents must provide a family summertime learning experience. The key word is interaction. Knowledge starts to come alive when it is shared with others.

Every day activities at home can easily become fun and full learning experiences. Examples include: have children read a recipe, then double it. This is a good way to practice math skills with fractions and ratios. Or when traveling on the road play word games: take along crossword puzzles, look for out-of-state license plates and ask children to name capitals of those states.

From Where I Sit

The Little Red Schoolhouse

"Young lady let me tell you about schools way back when I was a young lad," was my reply to her boasting about her teacher's new teaching program. I had reminisced the same story to my kids and then later to my grandkids so often that they dreaded to hear it anymore.

How I had to trudge about two miles through sleet, snow, and rain (Minnesota winters) to my "Little Red Schoolhouse" on the hill. There were no hot lunches served, just my ho-hum own-made peanut butter and jelly sandwich which I had to make myself so I could have no complaints. Besides the sandwich in my old syrup pail lunch box, I had two big, shiny, red apples, one for me and one for the teacher which helped make me the teacher's pet.

In those days the teacher was in complete charge, and a slap across the knuckles with her trusty ruler was not at all uncommon. One year I had four classmates in my grade (three of them were brothers). The next year I was the only one in the class. Our feisty little teacher, Miss Raymond, would choose me to help her with the lower classes. Another one of my chores was to pull on a rope that rang the big bell up in the tower to summon the kids to class.

The boy's and girl's rest rooms were outhouses up behind the school building which were used very little in winter, but in summer were used often as an excuse to goof-off.

Our manual training class was taught in the basement by the old janitor. The project of the class the first year that I attended that school was to refinish the desk tops that the kids had defaced the year before by carving deep initials in them.

After a few yawns from my boring story, Jennelle, the cute young lady that is our across-the-street neighbor, proceeded to tell me about her school classes at Mt. Vernon Elementary.

Her dedicated teacher, Mr. John Moorehead, has implemented a super educational program that has really been an incentive for the kids to achieve higher grades.

The program is based on the banking theory. A bank account is set up for each student for buying and selling with "Bogus Money." Property such as their desks have to be purchased and other items can be bought at a store set up in the Mall every other Friday. Fines are paid for class infractions and poor grades, while awards are made for good class behavior and better grades.

Bank books are used for deposits and withdrawals with interest paid on savings. Mr. Moorehead supervises the "Banking Program" with the strictest scrutiny. My little friend, Jennelle Simon, is all excited about the new incentive program that seems to be working at her school.

Hats off to this dedicated school teacher who has replaced the rap across the knuckles with a make-sense plan.

A Body of Water

by Dr. Boyd B. Stewart, D.C.

Now that summer is quickly approaching, it is extremely important to talk about water intake. Most of us do not drink enough water even though it is the most abundant and, by far, the most important nutrient found in the body.

The vital need for water is not recognized by most people, yet most of the major systems of the body need water to function properly. Skin, the covering of the body, loses water everyday through perspiration. The lungs require approximately two glasses of water each day to function properly. The small intestines also need water to function properly; and the lack of it can be a factor in faulty elimination. Your kidneys, which are the most important organs in the body's elimination system, utilize a large quantity of water daily to carry out waste.

The need for water is increasingly important in the summer months when the temperatures rise and people become more active in outdoor activities. There has also been an increase in the drinking of sodas and iced tea to satisfy the increased thirst.

Unfortunately, the caffeine found in these products causes an increase in metabolism which increases the depletion of nutrients and elimination of water and leads to an even more depleted body.

The type of water drunk is also important as tap water tends to have high levels of chemicals to destroy bacteria. These chemicals have been known to increase vitamin depletion in the body and may even cause cancer. Therefore, it is best to drink purified drinking water and then to provide an adequate mineral intake by eating mineral rich foods or supplementing the diet.

Generally speaking, adults should drink at least six to eight glasses of water daily and more if there is increased activity or perspiration.

The body is a complex and unique machine which needs water to function. Attention to water intake is a small price to pay for the benefits received.

Have a wonderful summer and don't forget to drink your water!

Guild forming to support ECPAC

A new guild is now being formed to help support "The Jewel of East County," the East County Performing Arts Center. The organizers of ECPAC's highly successful New Year's Gala are creating the association to assist them in their fund-raising efforts. Memberships will range from $25 to $100 and provide participants with benefits such as discount tickets to the spectacular New Year's Gala, admittance to "members only" parties, and special charter membership recognition. Monies raised will go toward special theater programs, facility improvements, and future projects.

A backstage party to celebrate the Guild's debut and highlight the advantages of membership will be held on Monday, June 4th at 5:30 p.m. Guests will enjoy wine, champagne, and hors d'oeuvres, take a fascinating backstage tour, and get the inside scoop on the exclusive 1990 New Year's Eve Gala. Those interested in obtaining reservations for the party or learning more about joining the Guild can get further information by calling ECPAC at 440-0372.

The East County Performing Arts Center is a magnificent, 1200-seat theatre located in the center of El Cajon's "super block." It was designed to serve the cultural interests of the expanding suburban area. A wide variety of entertaining performances, informative seminars, and community functions have been presented in the acoustically superior setting.

One of the highlights of ECPAC's season is the New Year's Eve Gala. "An Evening in Vienna" was the 1989 theme for this lavish event.

Lamplighters auditioning

"Fatal Attraction," the play by Bernard Slade, shares the name with a movie, but there the similarity ends. Slade's masterful way of defining his characters fits every actor's dream.

The Lamplighters Community Theatre of La Mesa will hold auditions for the San Diego premiere of "Fatal Attraction" on Sunday, June 10, and Monday, June 11, at 7 p.m. at the theater, 8053 University Avenue (next to the library).

Directed by Kelly Rae Hero and produced by Carol E. Brown, roles are available for three men - one 35, one mid-40's and one early 50's - and three women - two in their 30's and one 35 to 45.

Production dates are August 10th through September 16th. For further information call Carol Brown at 464-7546.

Old Globe closes season with "Lady Day at the The Emerson Bar and Grill" and "And a Nightingale Sang"

The Old Globe is closing out its Season '90 with a history lesson being presented on both the main stage and in the Cassius Carter. Both presentations have style and sentimentality: it is your preference whether you want strength with song or suds.

It is March 1959, and you have come to Emerson's Bar & Grill in South Philadelphia to see the legend, Billie Holiday. As you check your hat, leave all preconceived notions (a Ross loss) you have of the Lady at the door. Tonight, Ms. Holiday is going to sing the tunes that have been written through her own tragedy (God Bless the Child, Strange Fruit, Don't Explain) and talk of the men and medications that have brought her to this performance.

In a 1933 issue of the British publication, Melody Maker, John Hammond wrote, "This month there has been a real find in the person of a singer called Billie Holiday...though only 18, she weighs over 200 pounds, is incredibly beautiful, and sings as well as anybody I ever heard."

"Standing there with the spotlight on her great, sad, beautiful face, a white gardenia in her hair," stated Hammond, "she sang the songs, and the singers were never the same thereafter."

Holiday herself attributes her style to "Louis Armstrong's feeling...and the big volume that Bessie Smith got...(thought) I didn't have a big voice...between the two of them, I sort of got Billie Holiday."

The spirit, the soul, the voice and the manner of "Lady Day" is captured in the mesmerizing performance of Loretta Devine. This lady transcends the music to transmit feeling and offers one of the finest musical memories I've experienced.

Billie enters the club rather shyly and rather high, but her work is so much a part of her life, that, eerily so, the diminishing life quality of the woman makes for a greater command of her stage presence. Playwright Lanie Robertson doesn't let the evening spiral down to grief and discomfort on either side of the footlights, but connects the song with story to try to give a definition to Holiday as her career, and life, are ending.

At the piano is her longtime friend and accompanist, Jimmy Powers (Rahn Coleman). On the saxophone is Charles McPherson. With such support, the music and the lyrics are a release of the soul of Holiday and an affirmation of the voice that Sinatra has called "the most important influence on American popular singing."

Over on the Main Stage, England is at war with Germany. C.P. Taylor's "And A Nightingale Sang" focuses more on the heroics of the British citizenry at home, male and female, than those in the actual trenches.

It is a time when making commitments, working out decisions and just getting off the mark is a difficult task. It was Chamberlain who set the tone of the times by allowing Hitler's movement into eastern Europe. But this production may not be everyone's cup of tea; there is too much soap in the water.

The Stotts are a family much like the Sycamore's in "You Can't Take it With You." Their eccentricities seem to be the rule rather than the exception. The mother (Katherine McGrath) is a devotee, grandfather (Jonathan McMurtry) an accentless, dyed-in-the-wool loon, father (Mitchell Edmonds) accompanying life at the upright; and sister Joyce (Lynne Griffin) vacillating between giggles and growing up.

All these loose ends are held in rein by the elder sister, Helen (Kandis Chappell). But in reminiscence of The Glass Menagerie's Laura, Helen is lame and very fragile. She just is more assertive in her understanding to her duties to home and hearth. She has been wooed by a seemingly perfect man (Alan Brooks), but true to the form of daytime drama, beware of this sheep!

So we sit for the course of the evening with the appropriate convolutions, few surprises and seemingly endless dramatic license. Craig Noel's direction bogs down so many times that the highpoints are just above sea level. Ken Dorsey's set stands a good cottage and Peter Maradudin's lighting gives good comfort as well as bombs bursting in air.

All in all, this production is a little less than an episode of a PBS import. Too derivative, too much acting and little to share with this family.

"Lady Day at the Emerson Bar and Grill" continues at the Cassius Carter through June 17th; "And A Nightingale Sang" plays through June 10th. Performances are Tuesday through Saturday at 8 p.m.; Sunday at 7 p.m. with weekend matinees. For box office information, call the Globe at 239-2255.

Summer School

There will be a Summer School program available for all students currently in grades kindergarten through seventh, beginning Wednesday, June 27 through July 25, 1990.

Kindergarten through third grades programs will be held at San Miguel and San Altos Schools. The program for grades 4-7 will be held at Lemon Grove Middle School. All programs run only during the mornings.

Enrollment forms will be sent home with the students near the end of May. (This is a change from previous practice.) In recent years, every student who was enrolled during the "enrollment period" did have a place in Summer School.

Sockers offer summer camps

The San Diego Sockers will conduct 55 soccer camps this summer at 17 locations throughout San Diego County for youngsters ages five through 19 as part of the new Summer Camp '90 program.

Summer Camp '90 will offer three different programs--recreational, advanced and goalkeeping and is the only San Diego soccer camp featuring exclusive instruction by the San Diego Sockers' players.

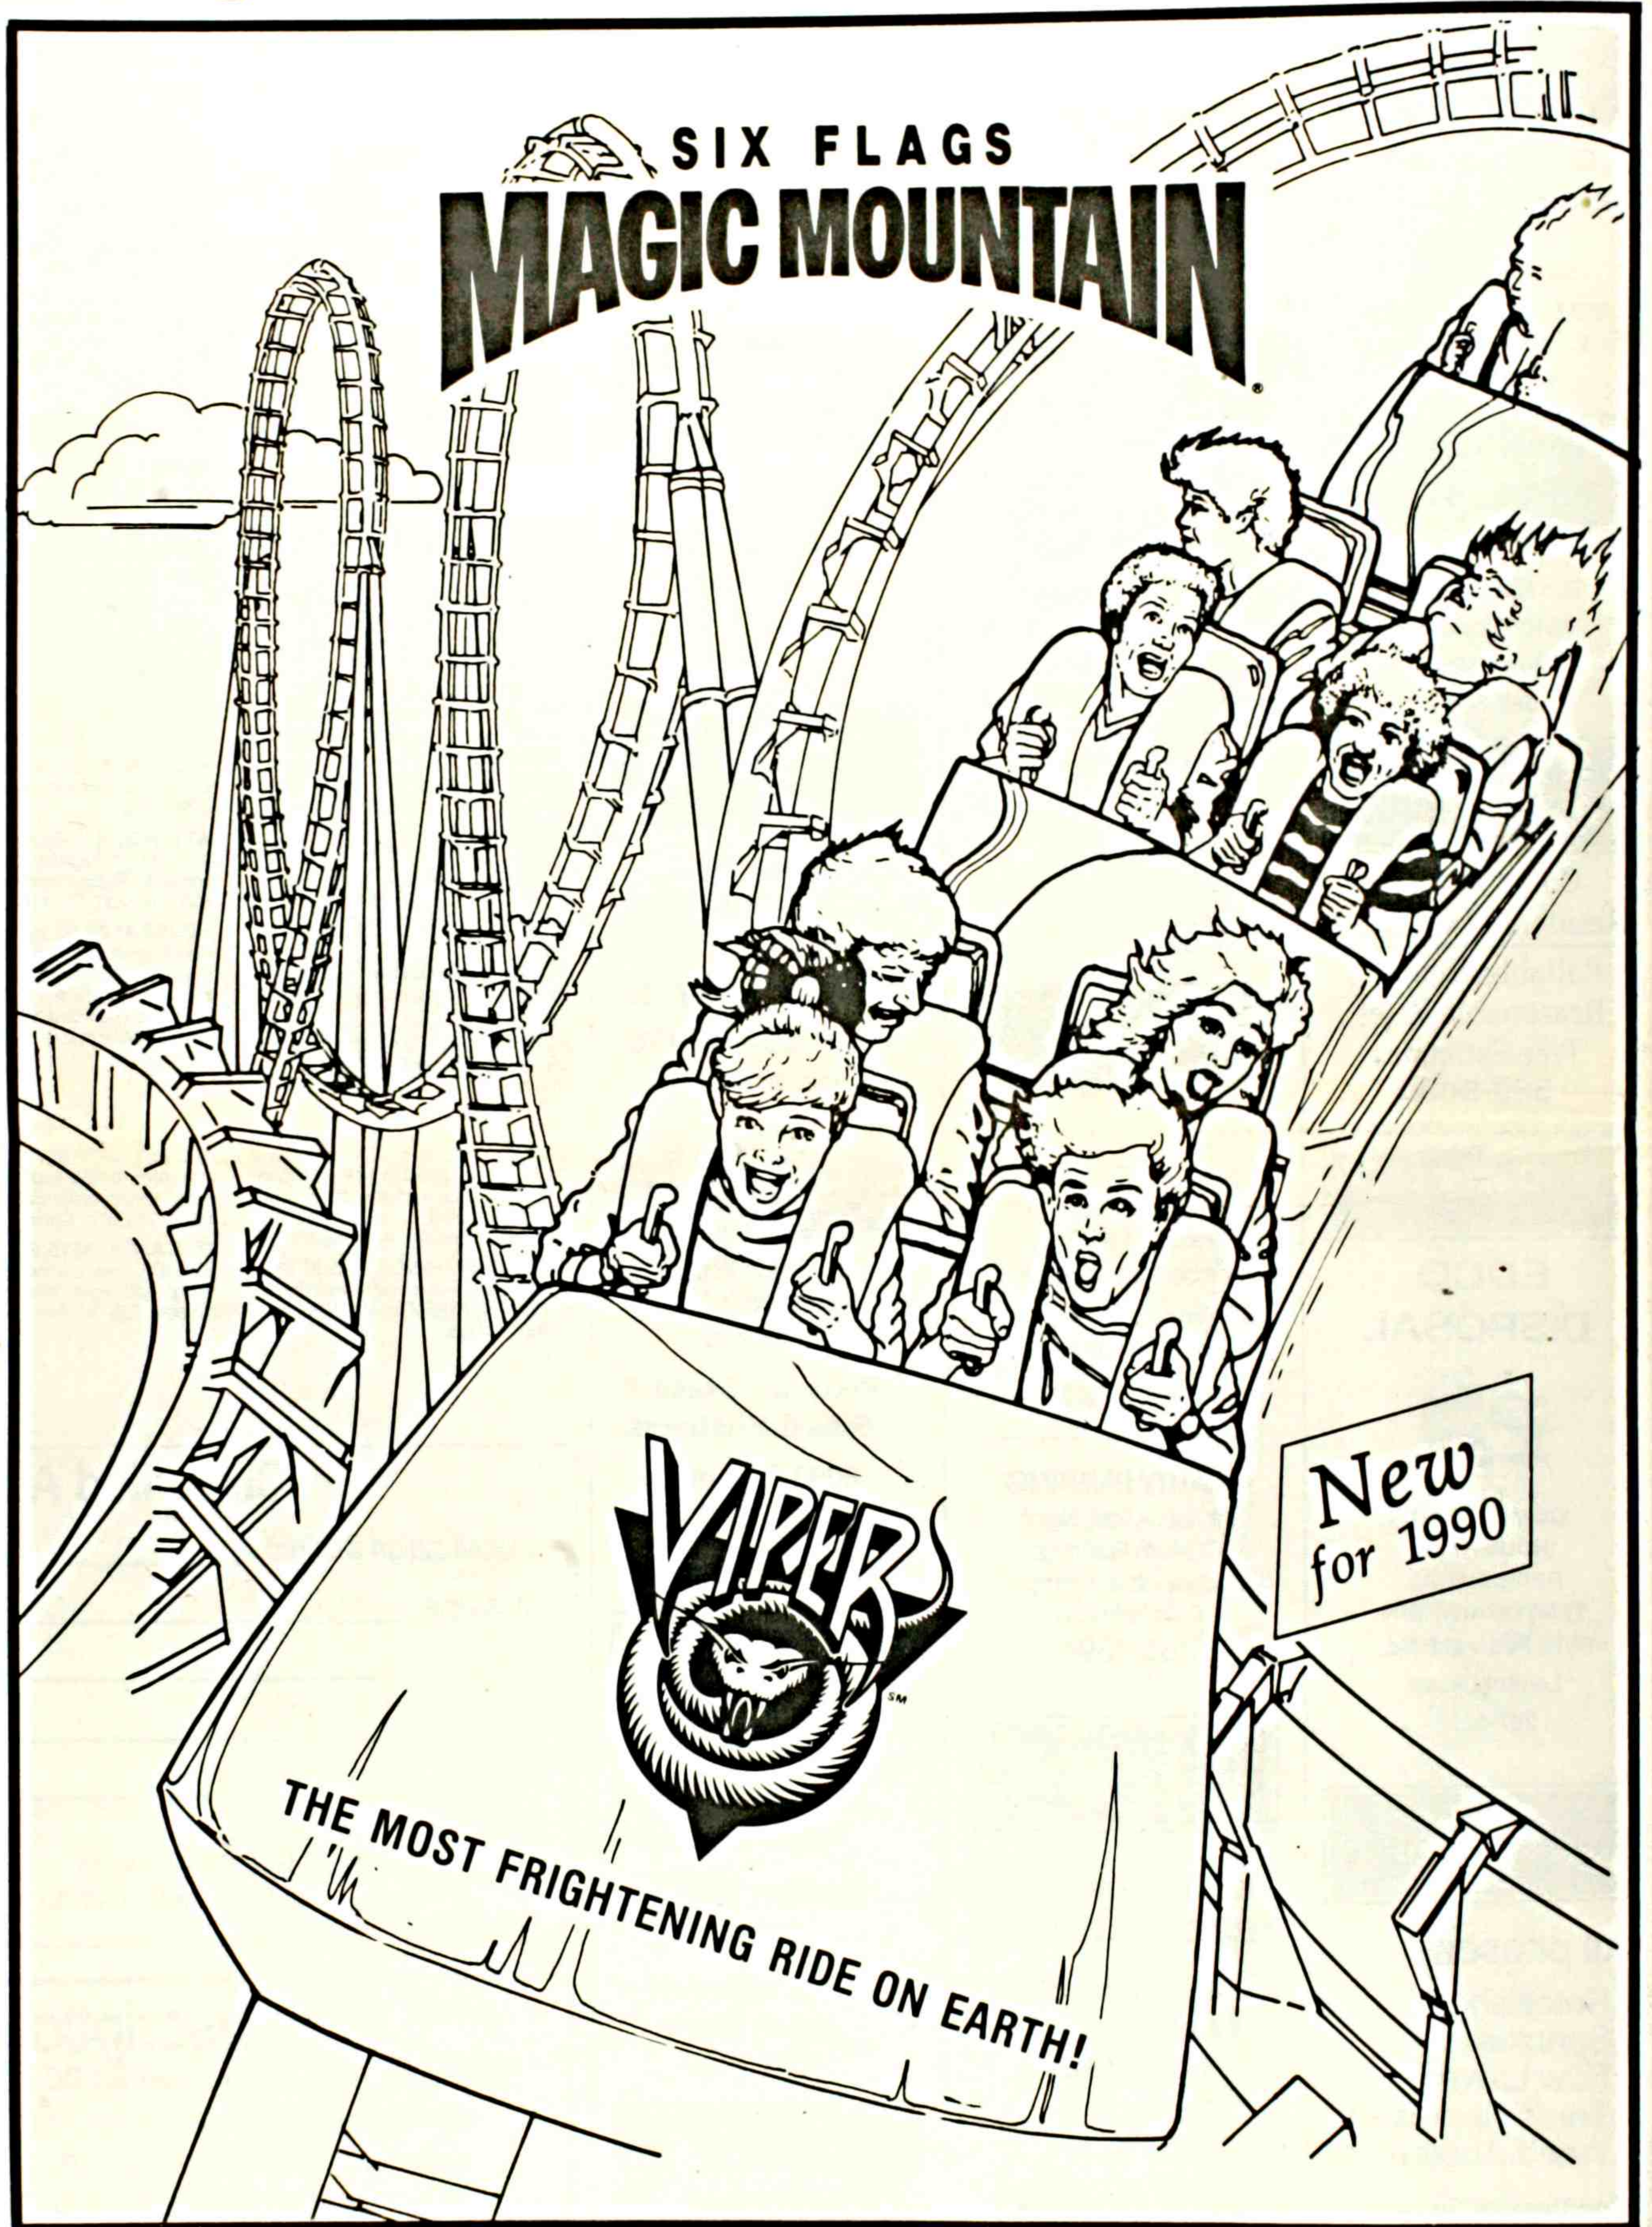

Each youngster attending the Sockers' Summer Camp '90 will receive a free replica Sockers' uniform (jersey, shorts and socks), Mountain Dew Sports Bottle, leather stitched soccer ball, special discount on soccer shoes from The Soccer Man, Camp Graduation Certificate, ticket to the Sockers' 1990-91 Opening Night, and a Summer Camp '90 team photo. Youngsters attending the goalkeeping camps will receive a Sockers' goalkeeper jersey instead of a replica uniform.

The Sockers are offering two weeks of instruction for $199 for the Recreational camps, and $249 for the Advanced and Goalkeeping sessions. Camps will be conducted Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m., with special arrangements available for parents needing full-day supervision for their children. One-week and additional week camp rates are also available.

For further information on the summer soccer program call Stacey Debter or Lynn Castner at 224-GOAL for a Summer Camp '90 brochure.
